

Indulgence Gay Cruises 3-Story Bundle

Paul just broke up with his cheating fiancée Claire, and he can't wait to take a vacation and get her out of his head. His best friend Nathan gives him an extra ticket to come along on an Indulgence Cruise with him ... what he doesn't tell Paul is that Indulgence is a gay cruise liner! How many men will it take Paul to forget his woes? And will he finally realize what's been right in front of him all along? [12k] [Warning: contains explicit descriptions of sex] EXCERPT: Paul let his eyes wander back down and over the blue carpet, an endless sea of starfish embroidery. His head was swimming. If there had ever been a time when he was more confused than now, he couldn't remember it. Possibly his high school calculus final. Even then, at least he had a clear idea of what he was trying to find, even if he couldn't find it. And now? As Nathan came over to the bed and sat down by him, Paul wondered if he had been looking for the wrong thing his entire life. He felt Nathan's hand, warm and strong, slide over his own, and looked up into questioning eyes. Paul remembered the days when he was a sophomore and Nathan was a freshman, just starting out as shortstop and second base. They had been settling down into their positions, and hadn't yet found the rhythm between them. In the first scrimmage match, Paul remembered checking his place on the infield again and again as the batter tapped the bat against his shoes, adjusting the distance between Nathan and himself. When the ball left the pitcher's hand and cracked low off of the bat, it was on the worst possible trajectory for a grounder to take, right through the pitcher's mound on his right side where a southpaw pitcher might have scooped it up but a righty was at great disadvantage. The ball sped past the mound, curving over it and in between Paul and Nathan, who had not yet worked out the grey area along the line to second base. They both went for it, then both stopped, leaving a space of about a foot between their gloves for the ball to roll through. Man, the coach had yelled at them but good. That moment, though--the moment when they stood close together, staring at each other with uncertainty in their eyes--this was what Paul felt again looking at Nathan on the small cruise ship bed. It was like they hadn't known each other before that moment; they had to start over again, start from nothing and work out this fuzzy space in between both of their bodies. Nathan, always calm, lifted a hand to Paul's cheek. Paul's shoulders untensed as the hand caressed his jaw. Nathan would help him figure this out. The ship swayed underneath the bed, shifting its path in the middle of the vast ocean, where navigation was impossible except for the stars. Paul's gaze came to rest on Nathan's hand, on the place right between the palm and the wrist right beneath the glove line. He bent his head and kissed his best friend's hand right there, pressing his lips to the warm skin. His eyes closed, he moved his mouth up and kissed the open palm, the rough skin calloused from hard work and hard play. Letting his lips part, he tasted salt and heard Nathan's breath catch. He looked back up. Nathan had a desire in his eyes that Paul could not recognize. Paul leaned forward and gently pressed his lips against his best friend's. The world didn't fall apart.
