

Ernesto Neto: Anthropodino

Brazilian artist Ernesto Neto (born 1964) has won legions of fans with his soft, biomorphic sculptural installations that invite viewers to touch and poke them, seducing and activating all of the senses at once. Often using a white stretchy material stuffed with styrofoam pellets and sometimes aromatic spices, Neto aims to provoke an experience of powerful bodily sensuousness in his audience, whom he encounters in a variety of settings, from galleries and museums to outdoor public sites. Anthropodino chimes with a number of large shows opening internationally in 2010, and provides a first substantial overview of Netos career, with a focus on the artists hugely popular 2009 installation of that name, exhibited at the Park Avenue Armory (where it filled the 55,000 square foot hall). This much-lauded work, which draws upon every element of Netos practice, and which was memorably characterized by one reviewer as art that loves you back, serves neatly as a springboard to appraise the full range of the artists achievements over the past two decades. Published in collaboration with the Brazilian publisher Cobogo.

- 5 min - Uploaded by lisWalking through one of the most interesting works of art I have ever experienced, made by the - 2 min - Uploaded by Pedro MenchenErnesto Neto. Brazil, 1964. Biomorphc installations. inside the whale. Unusual smells. Strange Installation view of Ernesto Netos anthropodino via Park Avenue Armory. The Park Avenue Armory opened its first commissioned artSoft gravitational pull towards fleshy architectural bodies. External Stimuli : Ernesto Neto at the Armoury. Nodes density organic soft surreal transparency womb. Anthropodino Inside the womblike space of Ernesto Netos installation at the Park Avenue Armory. The hanging pieces are filled with spices. ernesto netos, anthropodino, at the park avenue armory, new york, is the brazilian artists largest installation to date. An installation by the Brazilian artist Ernesto Neto comes to life in the said Mr. Neto, who has titled the installation anthropodino, perhaps to No doubt about it, Ernesto Netos Anthropodino installation at the Park Avenue Armory was a tad unusual C-Monster called it momsPhoto from Ernesto Neto: anthropodino on May 14, 2009. May 14 Click here to view Park Avenue Armory and anthropodino on Creative Time TV. An Epic - 2 min - Uploaded by Museo Guggenheim BilbaoLas piezas del artista brasileneno Ernesto Neto (Rio de Janeiro, 1964) han sido creadas para For its first commissioned art installation, the Park Avenue Armory and curator Tom Eccles invited Brazillian artist Ernesto Neto to design one of - 3 min - Uploaded by ernesto solisErnesto Neto. Um manifesto a favor do coco. Agua de coco Ernesto Neto. ernesto