

My Heart to Bear [A Bear Shifter New Adult Romance]

Crashed in the Alaskan Wilderness and pursued by a good-looking grizzly shifter? Curvy and stubborn Katherine York expected only to spend some quality time with her big brother, Owen, but didn't think that the re-bonding would occur high above glaciers and remote forests of southeastern Alaska. As luck would have it, the float plane's engine fails, and it goes down in woods far from civilization. With Owen hurt, Kat does the only logical thing... she goes to find help. Evan Mattison is a big, hot grizzly bear shifter and a tracker for the Priest Point police department... and a damned good one. When a call comes in that an aircraft went down north of town, Evan is sent to find survivors. Only after Evan picks up Kat's scent does he realize this isn't a typical search and rescue... this time, he's searching for his mate. Note: This paranormal urban romance contains scorching hot love scenes. If you tend to shy away from reading paranormal erotica, you may not like this story. However, if you like hot grizzly bear shifters who can't seem to get enough of his curvy, hard-headed woman, this story is for you!

Excerpt: Kat, Evan said, still so low she could barely hear him. I have the situation under control, ok? I don't want you to be afraid of what I'm about to do. Kat wrinkled her brow, confused. Why would she be afraid of Evan shooting the bear? And why wouldn't he just do it and get it over with already? Kat watched Evan slowly lean down and put the shotgun on the ground. He must be going to use the pistol, she thought. But instead of removing the pistol from its holster, he took the holster off entirely. Kat was baffled, but sure there must be some reason. Some obscure, little-known reason why one would not want to have a holster on when shooting a bear. But then again, everything about shooting a bear was obscure and little-known to her. He dropped his pack quietly to the ground and started taking off his shirt. Kats eyes got wide as she momentarily forgot about the massive predator in front of them and saw only the muscles of Evans back and arms. How is a human being built like that? she wondered. Each individual muscle was well-defined and rippled with his motion. Kat swallowed hard. Good God, the man looks like hes chiseled out of marble! Does he do anything but work out? He doesnt look like he has an ounce of fat on him! She saw a flicker of movement beyond Evan Just trust me, Kat, he said, still taking off his pants. Kat found herself distracted again as Evan dropped his pants and boxers together. That ass! she thought. Does it ever stop? His legs were just as muscular as the rest of him and she momentarily imagined what it would be like to feel them against hers in bed. Another movement beyond him brought her back to reality. If they survived, shed have plenty of time to check him out later. Of course, hed have clothes on again... She let her eyes linger on his perfect backside for another moment to cement it in her memory, then spoke up. Evan, the bear! Its ok, Kat, he said, still not turning to look at her. He seemed to be focusing his eyes on the bear even if he was inexplicably stripping down to his admittedly very nice birthday suit. Dont be scared. Kat watched him roll his neck and inhale deeply. She blinked her eyes hard as he exhaled. It looked like he was actually getting bigger, his legs lengthening and his shoulders broadening. As his body exploded in size, Kat saw his muscled flesh disappear under a thick coat of hair that looked like an animals fur. She heard a low rumble start and explode into a roar. The sound was close. Too close. The bear that had surprised them had its mouth closed. It wasnt roaring. Kat realized with horror that it was coming from Evan.
