

The Woman In Me

This is a story about Emma, as told by her. The first chapter starts in the present day with her initiating a sex-game with a stranger in a bar. Subsequent chapters touch on her childhood and schooldays, then record, in detail, her transformation from a plain, shy, young woman into an attractive, confident, sexually adventurous one. This comes about through her relationship with Vincent, a man, about 10 years older than her. They both work at the same place, a law firm, where she is a secretary and he is a lawyer. She hears, through anecdotes from other secretaries, of his reputation in the firm, as a sexual predator of young secretaries. They first meet when she answers his plea for someone to stay late one evening to do some urgent work for him. Afterwards, he offers to give her a lift home and much to her surprise (and delight), he shows interest in her and they start a relationship. This soon releases her pent-up sexual frustrations and causes her to become sexually curious and adventurous. Vincent is highly educated and is a very strong, confident, dominating character. Emma has a very limited education, no self-confidence and is, by nature, submissive. These mutually complimentary characteristics help them both to achieve the sex life they have always wanted. With his encouragement and guidance Emma rapidly evolves into a woman who enjoys experiencing new sexual adventures, dressing provocatively and indulging in sex-games with strangers. But as the new Emma evolves she develops her own ideas about what she wants from her sex-life, with consequences that neither she nor Vincent had foreseen.?
